'Inspired Stories of youth action on the Sustainable Development Goals'

22 September 2018 marks the beginning of Global Goals Week. The UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) are an ambitious plan to 'Transform our World' in the face of complex ecological, social and human rights challenges which call upon all individuals and sectors of society to the urgent task of healing and securing our common world. To mark this week, Caroline Marsh will discuss Global Goals Action in WA and share examples of how young people are recognising and addressing urgent global challenges by participating in local action in their schools and communities.

Dr Caroline Marsh is a WA leader in the field of Global Education. She is the Education Coordinator at the One World Centre
